School of Economics and Management, Beijing, China

Tsinghua University's School of Economics and Management (SEM) is located in Beijing, China, one of the most exciting and rapidly expanding economic centers in the world. Tsinghua university campus is situated on former royal gardens of the Qing Dynasty, surrounded by historical sites in northwest Beijing. This garden-like landscape, with the Wanquan River meandering through, has inspired and motivated generations of students.

Tsinghua's MBA program, first launched in 1991, is the most prestigious MBA program in the People's Republic of China. Also in 1997, SEM's International MBA program (curriculum formulated with a global perspective) came into being in cooperation with MIT's Sloan School of Management. By integrating globalization with localization, Tsinghua's MBA program attaches great importance to case study approach and curriculum innovation. Tsinghua's MBA program has also been dubbed "the most valuable MBA program in China" by Fortune (Chinese edition) in the years 2003 and 2004.
