

Universidad San Francisco de Quito (USFQ)

Quito, Ecuador

The Universidad San Francisco de Quito (USFQ) is a private, non-denominational liberal arts university in Quito, Ecuador. Without a doubt, it is one of the fastest growing and most dynamic educational institutions in Latin America. Founded in 1988 with 120 students, 12 professors and an 8000-volume library, USFQ now has 24,000 undergraduates, 500 foreign students, from 40 different countries, 45 majors, 13 Master's programs, doctoral programs in medicine and law, a variety of executive programs, and an 80,000-volume library.

USFQ is a non-profit institution that seeks to develop creative and innovative people with an entrepreneurial spirit. As a liberal arts university, USFQ offers valuable resources including a faculty composed of graduates with advanced degrees from many of the best universities in the world, the most modern library and computer services in Ecuador, and the most beautiful campus in Latin America. Learning does not only take place in the classroom, and here, the experience of learning to learn is shared among friends. With this vision, students participate in many extracurricular activities, including meetings at professors' homes, parties, field and social outings, clubs, sports, immersion in other cultures and meetings with students of other academic areas and nationalities.

Undergraduate Texas A&M University students at the junior level, will be permitted to take courses during USFQ semesters; see below. You must enroll for a minimum of 12 credit hours at TAMU per semester at USFQ. You must be fluent in Spanish to be able to attend classes and take full advantage of USFQ's academic program and cultural experience.
